Some plastic vents are also known, but have a tendency to mold or adhere to the fixture. The vent is connected to the faucet or toilet/urinal flange by means of a threaded tube. Vents can be used to distribute hot and cold water to a sink or other fixture as desired. Most faucets are designed to supply cold water at a first temperature (e.g., 95° F.), with hot water available at a second temperature (e.g., 140° F.). However, many faucets are also designed to supply hot water at a temperature less than 140° F., typically less than 120° F., such as the first few drops of a continuous hot water flow. A common practice is to attach the vent to the flange via a vent tube with the vent tube having one of a variety of different sizes to accommodate a variety of different faucets. The position and orientation of the vent tube is typically determined by the placement of an end cap on the vent tube, which may include either a cap or a vent shield. The cap or vent shield is dimensioned to be mounted to the fixture via an externally threaded stud or the like. The cap or vent shield is typically adapted 77a5ca646e
