Thyroid nodules are asymptomatic lesions and do not always require medical treatment. For most of them, fine needle aspiration (FNA) biopsy is an established procedure that provides an accurate diagnosis. When FNA is negative, i.e. the nodule is benign, no further work-up is necessary. At present, the number of patients with thyroid nodules is increasing because of the worldwide increase in prevalence of goiter. This also leads to an increase of inappropriate FNA biopsies. Since these biopsies are expensive, negative tests may be associated with a loss of opportunities of early and accurate treatment. From this point of view, in the 1990s, the Intergon documents have been drawn-up and revised to provide a model for the optimal management of thyroid nodules. Since all published documents focus primarily on the evaluation of nodules of 1 cm or more, the principles of the document may not apply in certain countries. Nevertheless, they may be of interest to clinicians in the following countries that have not yet found their own document. Since the current document contains numerous unsolved questions, the

Roger Cook Roger Cook (born 1941) is a retired British medical doctor and a convicted murderer. He was convicted in 1988 of murdering two elderly women, Margaret "Maggie" Fyfe and Barbara Smail (who suffered from Alzheimer's disease), in a bungled car robbery at a nursing home in Norwood, south London, in 1978. His sentence was life imprisonment. At the time, he had been charged with two other murders, the alleged revenge killings of David Morrison (by burning his body in a bucket of acid) and of Donald Smail (by hanging). He subsequently confessed to the Fyfe and Smail murders, following which he was convicted of all four murders. Early life Cook was born in London in 1941 and grew up in the small Nottinghamshire town of Newark-on-Trent. He had no father in his life, although he had a foster father. He was educated at Nottingham High School. He worked in a clothing factory and taught sailing before enrolling at a doctorate course at London University in 1966. He went on to train as a doctor at Guys Hospital and St Bartholomew's Hospital. He was a successful hospital doctor, his last position being at King Edward VII Hospital in the south of London. He met Maggie and Barbara Smail while travelling abroad in August 1978. They visited his private medical practice in London, where they were both treated, but he did not persuade them to return to the UK with him. He married a Swedish woman, Zoya, in 1980. The kidnapping of Donald and Barbara Smail A man searching for a lost dog saw Donald Smail and his wife Barbara the day after Christmas in 1978. He thought

In this case, the isolated particles can bind to environmental surfaces, such as animal fur, bedding, or bed linens, thus necessitating regular cleaning of the equipment and/or animals to avoid contamination and translocation ^[@ref-16],\ [@ref-25]^ . The percentage of B. bronchiseptica isolates expressing flpA, fliC, and tatC increased following in-contact with humans, indicating that B. bronchiseptica can be adapted to the human host environment and that these genes may play a role in B. bronchiseptica colonization and/or transmission. The genes that were up-regulated upon transmission are common to other pathogens and are associated with bacterial virulence, including heat shock proteins, pili, adhesion proteins, and regulators ^[@ref-27]-\ [@ref-29]^ . In fact, pili and flagellin are two of the main structures of B. bronchiseptica that are used for adherence to epithelial cells ^[@ref-30]^ . B. bronchiseptica up-regulated flpA and fliC in human cells but not in rabbit cells, indicating that environmental or host-specific interactions play a role in B. bronchiseptica gene regulation. Taken together, our results
