{.1030} {.1031} {.1032} Great-Grandparents Dining Room Makeover Recent Posts The family table in the great-grandparents dining room is beginning to look a little tired. The perfect fabric comes in the mail one morning and before you know it, the kids are taking selfies while I'm still trying to figure out the new look. Thankfully, I'm a very patient grandma. 5 Tips for Selecting Dining Room Fabric in 4 Easy Steps 1. Start by deciding which room you'll use the fabric in. If you're leaning toward quilting, that will determine the fabric style. If you're just going to be using it in the dining room, choose an upholstery fabric for a more formal look. 2. Pick one or two colors you like. Feel free to experiment with the colors, but stick to one focal color and have the rest of the room be complementary. We picked a burgundy for the focal color and did the rest in ivory and mint green. 3. Decide where you want the fabric to be placed and how long you want it. We wanted the fabric to be centered and the length to cover the table top and bottom of the seating area, which is about a foot and a half. 4. Go to a fabric store and look at fabrics of similar quality and price. You can also head to the fabric selection on fabric.com. 5. Finally, measure your walls, floors, ceiling and furniture so you know exactly how much fabric you need. With strict government regulations and a shortage of qualified, experienced workers for the food and drink manufacturing sector, South Korean scientists are exploring an unlikely but potentially lucrative solution — to make a fermented solution that can be used to produce a nontoxic food and drink additive.
